

On the Subject of The Hatch

Every 104 minutes, you must stumble your drunk ass to the control room.

- So, you've been drinking on the job. Again.
- None of your fault really, being in charge of an EMP that can detonate the entire world if not dealt with on a consistent basis is hard work, and you deserve a break.
- Unfortunately you took the wrong time to take a break and the Dharma Station is at its four minute countdown.
- Again, no biggie as you know the code like the back of your hand, and besides, your coworker should be covering your shift. Right?
- Oh wait, you killed him in a drunken rage yesterday. Oops.
- You know the layout of the building, and you know the path to the control room, unfortunately you've been partying too hard and have no idea where you actually are.
- On top of that, you are drunk as shit. All arrow buttons are scrambled and move you in random (but consistent) directions.
- Find your way to the control room within the four minutes and type in the code to save the Earth for another hour and a half.
- A map of the Dharma Station can be found below, along with the code.
